Cookies, Mobile Device IDs and Online Advertising

What is a "Cookie"?

A cookie is a file containing an identifier (a string of letters and numbers) that is sent by a web server to a web browser and is stored by the browser. The identifier is then sent back to the server each time the browser requests a page from the server.

Cookies may be either "persistent" cookies or "session" cookies: a persistent cookie will be stored by a web browser and will remain valid until its set expiry date, unless deleted by the user before the expiry date; a session cookie, on the other hand, will expire at the end of the user session, when the web browser is closed.

Cookies do not typically contain any information that personally identifies a user, but personal information that we store about you may be linked to the information stored in and obtained from cookies.

What Cookies do we use and why?

We use cookies for the following reasons:

Strictly Necessary: These are all the cookies without which the website could not perform basic functions. They may be set automatically when pages load, or as a result of a user request that cannot be fulfilled without the use of the cookie. Generally, these are session cookies that expire on closing the browser but not always.

Performance: These cookies collect information about how visitors use a website, for instance which pages visitors go to most often, and if they get error messages from web pages. These cookies don't collect information that identifies a visitor. All information these cookies collect is aggregated and therefore anonymous. It is only used to improve how a website works.

Targeting/Advertising: These cookies are used to deliver advertisements more relevant to you and your interests. They are also used to limit the number of times you see an advertisement as well as help measure the effectiveness of the advertising campaign. They are usually placed by advertising networks with the website operator's permission. They remember that you have visited a website and this information is shared with other organizations such as advertisers. Quite often, targeting or advertising cookies will be linked to site functionality provided by the other organization.

Who do we share cookie information with?

AdRoll: Our public facing website uses AdRoll cookies to provide targeted advertising content based on your browsing choices. If you do not wish to receive this type of tailored advertising, you can visit <https://www.networkadvertising.org/choices/> to opt out of most online ad networks that use such advertising, including AdRoll.

Facebook: We share our Facebook cookies with Facebook regarding the interests of website visitors via widgets such as the 'Like' button found on our website. This is used to serve targeted advertising to website visitors when logged into Facebook services and other Facebook partner websites.
